

Kolisi explains how Boks got the job done

Nienabar praises Kolbe’s crucial role

The Springboks earned the right to meet England in Saturday’s Rugby World Cup semifinal, but it required a performance of real grit to edge France 29-28 in a tense quarterfinal in Paris on Sunday. France and SA delivered some scintillating and brutal rugby, with the game on a knife’s edge in the closing minutes.

The match did not have the extreme skill level and technical excellence of Saturday’s quarterfinal between the All Blacks and Ireland, but for tension and nerve-jangling suspense it served up a classic.

Just when it looked like the Springboks would fail to find that extra gear to make up a six-point deficit, the excellent Eben Etzebeth was as long of stride as he was of desire.

His converted try with 13 minutes to go gave the Boks a one-point lead before Handré Pollard landed a long-range penalty to stretch it to four. Though Thomas Ramos added another penalty to bring the hosts to within a point again, France had no more to offer.

In the Bok pack, Etzebeth, Bongi Mbonambi, Pieter-Steph du Toit and Frans Malherbe played leading roles from the start, while Kwagga Smith and Ox Nché upped the energy and urgency in the second half.

The way the Boks maintained their integrity in defence helped to break French resolve for the 10 minutes after the break that Etzebeth was in the sin bin.

At the back, Cheslin Kolbe proved a thorn in France’s flesh, while centres Damian de Allende and Jesse Kriel were equally effective in attack and defence.

Kolbe’s first-half try had SA delirious, while his charge-down of Ramos’s attempted conversion after Peato Mauvaka’s try proved to be crucial in the final analysis.

“Cheslin’s charge-down, you don’t see that often, somebody chasing a lost cause,” Bok head coach Jacques Nienaber said.

“...the effort the players put in was enormous.”

Captain Siya Kolisi said. “Yeah, I think a lot of questions were asked of us as a group by the French team. The character of the boys stood out.

“We knew how hard they were going to be. They were tough to stop with 15 men, so imagine how hard it was with 14,” Kolisi said about the 10 minutes that Etzebeth found himself in the sideline.
