1. PURPOSE

- 1.1. To appoint a Professional Service Provider to develop a business case that clearly demonstrate the value propositions and a business case and the establishment of a dedicated National Research Foundation (NRF) research chair for timber research for a period of six (6) months.
- 1.2. The primary role and purpose is to give effect to the Department's legal mandate as contained in the National Forests Act (1998); Section 5:
 - (1) The Minister must carry out or commission research
 - (2) The research must promote the objectives of forest policy and conform with national policies and programs relating to science and technology.

2. INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

- 2.1. The Forestry management branch is mandated with the responsibility of implementing the forestry research and development strategy with the support of the National Forest Research Forum (NFRF). It is responsible for the strategic planning and coordination of national research priorities and is also required to address the funding gap for forest Research and Development (R&D) to get it in line with national standards. It oversees the allocation of funds to various types of research programs at various research institutions within the country on an equitable and competitive basis.
- 2.2. The forest sector Research and Development (R&D) in South Africa requires a significant increase in investment to fund themes and sub-themes of national interest. The current R&D expenditure by the Department requires a significant increase in funding to achieve the transformation of the rapidly declining forest sector R&D activities. Development of a business case that clearly demonstrates the value propositions will assist the forestry sector when lobbying for additional investment to national and international bodies and will provide an opportunity to maximise funding and promote collaboration between existing role players. Pockets of success were recognised where research excellence and public funding converged to allow capacity development and good research outputs, but overall public funding had been inadequate to address all the important research needs of the sector with the consequence that none of the goals of the strategy have been achieved.
- 2.3. Skills shortage and human capital development in the forestry sector remain a significant challenge for the forest R&D sector and this situation has now become critical and is affecting the Government, tertiary institutes, natural landscapes, rural communities, urban forests, and industry. This applies to specialists as well as middle and senior R&D managers. An adequate pipeline of graduates and postgraduates do not exist in the sector and therefore the replacement needs, as expert skills are lost from Government, research organisations, and the private sector to overseas employment opportunities, are not being met. The deficient pipeline also means that there is an inadequate pool of young candidates to replace the maturing demography of skills in the sector resulting in a loss of institutional memory and mentors as older specialists and managers leave and retire. It has also resulted in a significant decline in the institutional capacity of important research organisations such as the Institute of Commercial Forestry Research (ICFR), the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR) and universities with top students leaving for overseas universities or entering into other South African industries instead of furthering their studies in R&D for the forest sector.

- 2.4. The development of a business case for the establishment of a dedicated NRF research chair will strengthen the links between academia, industry, and associations through long-term partnerships. Research Chairs initiative will strengthen and improve research and innovation capacity of public universities for producing high quality postgraduate students and research and innovation outputs. Serious skills shortages in the sector include conventional R&D skills (e.g. silviculture, forest engineering, tree breeding, tree pathology, entomology, tree physiology, tree nurseries, forest growth and yield science, forest planning, forest ecology, sustainable resource utilisation), skills in new areas (e.g. precision forestry, spatial technologies, molecular breeding, biotechnology and, the inclusion of social sciences in the forestry curriculum) and specialist, middle and senior R&D managers, and operational managers. The establishment of Research Chair will address the skills shortages by expanding the scientific research and innovation capacity in the sector; Improve South Africa's international research and innovation competitiveness while responding to social and economic challenges in the country; Attract and retain excellent researchers and scientists; Increase the production of masters and doctoral graduates; and Create research career pathways for young and mid-career researchers, with a strong research, innovation and human capital development output.

3. OBJECTIVES

- 3.1. The main aim of the project is to develop a funding business case that clearly demonstrates the value propositions and to develop a business case for the establishment of a dedicated research chair for timber research.

4. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF WORK

- 4.1. The appointed service provider will assist DFFE by developing a business case that clearly demonstrates the value propositions.

- 4.4. The project will take only six (6) months and the service provider will be contracted for six months, within which it will be expected to deliver as per the deliverables outlined in paragraph 5 below.
