REPUBLIC OF SOUTH AFRICA

TERMS OF REFERENCES FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF A SERVICE PROVIDER FOR POLLUTION PREVENTION AND EMERGENCY RESPONSE ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN ECONOMIC EXCLUSIVE ZONE AND BEYOND

1 BACKGROUND

The Department of Transport (DOT) through its agency the South African Maritime Safety Authority (SAMSA) is responsible for Marine Environmental Protection. Furthermore, the DOT assists the vessels that are in distress for purposes of prevention of environmental pollution. The services of marine pollution prevention and salvage operations have been made possible by the awarding of a contract for emergency towing vessel (ETV) to a service provider.

A tug is a marine vessel that maneuvers other vessels by pushing or pulling them with direct contact or a tow line towards the port. The standby tug will prevent vessels from major casualty with the risk of pollution. Where an accident has already happened, the standby tug will provide salvage services quickly as possible to prevent the South Africa's coastline from pollution. It is intended that when the current contract expires, the new service provider will be on board. This will help ensure continuity of service.

Contracting independent service provider will promote transformation and allow new entrants into the market. This means providing opportunities to South Africans in terms of full and effective participation in the maritime sector.

This request for proposal (RFP) aims to provide guidelines to all interested parties in order to submit proposals at competitive rates. It is important for parties that are bidding to adhere to the suggested format of the proposal included in this RFP document. Furthermore, interested parties are requested to pay special attention to the disclaimer, terms and conditions in this document.

The Department intends to conclude new contract and now invites proposals from the maritime industry for the provision of marine pollution prevention plan and service that will meet the requirements of this bid.

Statutory pollution prevention and response powers are provided in the Marine Pollution (Control and Civil Liability) Act, 1981, and in the Marine Pollution (International) Act, 1987. These Acts give powers in respect of Pollution incidents and casualties in so far as pollution threats and incidents within waters under South African jurisdiction, being waters comprising the internal and territorial waters, the exclusive economic zone, and in certain cases, also water above the continental shelf. The South African Government's strategy supporting these statutory powers includes provision of an effective sea borne pollution prevention and response capability.

The DoT's intention is that South Africa has on contract a deep-sea salvage tug on standby until it builds its own tugs.

2 SCOPE OF WORK

2.1 GOAL

The Department has defined the protection and enhancement of the country's environmental assets and natural resources as one of its key supporting outcomes in its Medium-Term Strategic Framework for the period 2020 – 2025.

The standby tugs primary functions are to prevent pollution by:

- a) Towing casualties away from the coast.
- b) Standing by stricken vessels.
- c) Assist vessels that are in distress
- d) Assisting in pulling grounded vessels off the coast and, in general.
- e) Any other emergency requirements that might arise.

2.2 OBJECTIVES (SCOPE OF WORK)

South Africa is mandated through the various International Conventions and South African legislation to prevent and manage the coast within its jurisdiction and in particular prevent marine pollution.

The objectives of SAMSA, an agency of the Department, per the South African Maritime Safety Authority Act 5 of 1998 include preventing and combating pollution from vessels operating in the marine environment, as well as promoting South Africa's maritime interests.

The call for South Africa to own the Emergency Towing Vessels (ETVs) was again emphasized by the Policy statement 22(b) of the Comprehensive Maritime Transport Policy (CMTP), which stipulates that the Department shall ensure that there is pollution prevention Emergency Towing Vessels as defensive mechanism to stave off any marine pollution threats along South African Coastline.

2.3 DELIVERABLES

The deliverables or output of the project:

- a) Reduce level of pollution at sea
- b) Marine pollution prevention and response vessel capability.
- c) Enhance transformation of the maritime sector

The use of ETV is crucial in the prevention of marine pollution by other ships as well as the efficient and expedient reporting of marine accidents to alleviate the damage as quickly as possible.

In order to support its legislative objectives of preventing and combating the pollution of the marine environment by ships and to ensure the safety of life and property at sea, SAMSA, through the Department, has contracted the services of an emergency towing vessel.

The Department further envisage that the project should include an emergency marine towing service that will enable SAMSA to respond to pollution threats from vessels operating in South Africa's exclusive economic zone in accordance with the requirements of the Marine Pollutions (Prevention of Pollution from Ships) Act (2 of 1986) and in support of SAMSA's legislative objectives. The preferred service provider must take note of the size of the coastline.

The department requests the bidders to outline the contingency plan to effectively address the issue of turnaround time. The bidders are required to indicate the plans to respond to incidents from both the West and East coastline within an acceptable turnaround time, e.g. if a vessel is stranded on the East coastline, assistance should be made available as soon as possible instead of waiting for a tug that is based on the West coastline.

Capabilities of ETV

In order to respond effectively to an oceangoing vessel in heavy South African weather offshore, an ETV must have:

2.3.1. Sufficient free running speed of at least 14 knots and above at Beaufort force 10 to reach the affected vessel in
