This policy statement provides direction on process of planning, organising, controlling, executing and monitoring changes that affect the delivery of the Western Cape Government (WCG) ICT services.

The following specific provisions are made:

1. Change Control Management encompasses the operational systems and application software which will be subject to strict change management control.
2. In particular, the following Change Control Elements items will be considered:
 - Identification and recording of significant changes;
 - Planning and testing of changes;
 - Assessment of the potential impacts, including security impacts, of such changes;
 - Formal approval procedure for proposed changes;
 - Communication of change details to all relevant persons;
 - Fall-back procedures, including procedures and responsibilities for aborting and recovering from unsuccessful changes and unforeseen events.
3. The Change Control Lifecycle a change request is as follows:
 - Change request initiation
 - Control of changes

- Authorisation of changes
- Update documentation
- Change Implementation
- Closure

4. The Change Control Procedures includes the following:

a) The implementation of changes will be controlled by the use of the formal change control procedures. Introduction of new systems and major changes to existing systems will follow a formal process of documentation, specification, testing, quality control, and managed implementation. This process will include a risk assessment, analysis of the impacts of changes, and specification of security controls needed. Therefore the change control procedures includes the following:

- Maintaining a record of agreed authorisation levels;
- Ensuring changes are submitted by authorised users;
- Reviewing controls and integrity procedures to ensure that they will not be compromised by the changes;
- Identifying all software, information, database entities, and hardware that require amendment;
- Obtaining formal approval for detailed proposals before work commences;
- Ensuring authorised users accept changes prior to implementation;
- Ensuring that the system documentation set is updated on the completion of each change and that old documentation is archived or disposed of;
- Maintaining a version control for all software updates;
- Maintaining an audit trail of all change requests;
- Ensuring that operating documentation and user procedures are changed as necessary to remain appropriate;
- Ensuring that the implementation of changes takes place at the right time and does not disturb the business processes involved.

b) Changing software can impact the operational environment. The testing of new software will be done in an environment segregated from both the production and development environments. This provides a means of having control over new software. This should include patches, service packs, and other updates. Automated updates should not be used on critical systems as some updates may cause critical applications to fail.

5. The Change Types are described as follows:

a. The implementation of the following change types will be adhered to.

a. The above diagram provides a comparison of the differences in change control flow for the different Change Types. Standard changes by definition are pre-approved changes and therefore follows the faster track. Emergency changes are generally performed on a non-scheduled basis in support or response of a service disruption or service failure. The table below provides a more detailed overview of the change types.

CHANGE TYPES	Normal Change	Emergency Change	Standard Change
Description	Normal changes require that all of the Change process steps be completed. These changes require a full range of assessments and authorizations to ensure completeness, accuracy, and the least possible disruption across the change environment. In addition, these changes must be scheduled to ensure that blackout periods are not violated, that CI modifications occur during defined Change Windows, that Change owners are available to perform the needed tasks, and so on.	An emergency Change is one that must be done immediately. It is of such a high priority that scheduling is not required. An example of an emergency Change might be the installation of new antivirus software during a period of severe viral infestation across the data center. Emergency Changes are ones that are typically not performed often and normally in response to a service disruption, service failure or event that has been recorded as an Incident.	Standard Changes are those that are relatively low-risk and well understood. Standard Changes are ones that you process frequently, such as installing a patch or implementing a database, middleware, or server build modification. Standard Changes do NOT have wide-ranging impacts on business-critical CIs, and they are processed so often that they do not need to be assessed, scheduled, or approved. All standard changes are evaluated before

	The normal type is used when a Change could produce impacts on business-critical applications and other critical CIs. Normal Changes might have a high risk, as determined by their impacts and probability of failure.	Emergency Changes are authorized by the Emergency CAB.	it is categorized as standard changes.
