1. BACKGROUND INFORMATION

These terms of reference lay out the capacity to be contracted by the Gauteng Department of Economic Development (henceforth 'the department') as multi-disciplinary specialist support to drive the following processes:

- a. To procure the subscription to economic data for a period of two years.
- b. To provide Economic Planning, through the Economic Research and Knowledge Management directorate with economic intelligence services for a period of two years.
- c. On the basis of the economic data, the data provided will be in a time series form and will be provided at both the macro and micro levels; covering global , regional and local economies (e.g. Gauteng and municipalities/regions).
- d. On the basis of economic intelligence services, the service will provide detailed insights on a wide range of economic issues, forecasts and the consolidated consensus about the likely economic trajectory.

The process expounded by these terms of reference is designed to be executed within the immediate to short term, with the expectation that the latest period at which the services will commence will be the start of the financial year 2021-22. Importantly, the Department of Economic Development Reserves the right to appoint more than one service provider.

As part of the Growing Gauteng Together 2030 framework embarked upon by the 6th administration, the Provincial Government continues to facilitate and promote economic activity across the Gauteng City Region (GCR). Of paramount importance is the ability to provide economic thought leadership that supports decision making; a task that the Economic Planning (EP) of the Gauteng Department of Economic Development (GDED) is mandated to fulfil . This being the case, timeous and comprehensive data, knowledge and economic advisory remain central to EP's general mandate. To this end, EP acquires and manages economic information from various platforms and sources to produce economic reports, advisory and insights in support of evidence-based decision making.

EP uses the data as the base for multiple analytics, hence the scope of the acquired data cuts across a variety of areas. These include investment, labour, economic output, income, expenditure, industry value add, financials, development and demographics among others. Furthermore, EP uses the data as a primary key input for tools such as the Gauteng Economic Barometer and economic/econometric models both of which are instrumental tools across the province.

To date, EP (through the Economic Research and Knowledge Management directorate) has been subscribing to a single source of economic data. However, this has posed challenges in that significant gaps still exist between the data and intelligence available to EP and the required evidence. EP is expected to provide advisory at the most granular level; for instance, while the issue of skills gap remains a challenge that is acknowledged by all, there is need for grainy details to be provided, where possible at a township level. While this level of detail remains fundamental for provincial government programmes and projects, EP has been operating within a limited scope of data access; and has not been able to deliver on all requirements and expectations.

With the increase in provincial economic evidence demand and the call for the focus on micro-level, the current data seem to be unable to meet these requirements or assist practitioners and policy makers to take informed decision. Central to policy shift in the province, is the integration, coordination and harmonisation of various economic activities, nodes and all the players that contribute to Growing Gauteng Together. There is also a lack of just-in-time data to assist in quick economic decisions. Despite the limited data sources available, the market is also struggling to develop and package data at a very low level. The new mandate, driven by the focus on townships, rural areas and spatial referencing (district model), demands that EP sources data that are responsive not only to the need of big businesses (macro-level) but also small and medium enterprises. The focus on the lower levels (ward and districts) calls for more of evidence-based decisions, hence there is an urgent need for acquisition of access to multiple economic datasets and industry information that adequately and comprehensively cover broad data needs. The acquired data will further serve as a base for centralisation of data access in the province going forward. This will also benefit development agencies and other economic players in the space.

The required data and intelligence services are as follows:

Economic Intelligence

Subscription to economic intelligence that allows EP and the province to keep abreast of the developments within both global and local economies and the implications thereof. The required economic advisory subscription has to be aligned to the major economic data revamps as well as the changes in the economy that arise from time to time. Detailed insights, forecasts and the consolidated consensus about the likely economic trajectory, given the economic developments and the prevailing circumstances are critical for this category. Further, the category includes economic analysis of consumer and retail market trends and the implications for the province.

Macro and Micro economic data services
