1 PURPOSE

- 1.1 To appoint a service provider for the supply, installation and commissioning of 32 low-cost air quality monitoring sensors for the Department of Forestry, Fisheries and the Environment, as well as the maintenance, repairs and technical support of the 32 sensors for a period of five (5) years.

2 INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

- 2.1 In terms of Section 24 of the Constitution, and the National Environmental Air Quality Act (AQA, 2004), government is enjoined to ensure that South Africans are breathing air that is not harmful to their health and wellbeing.
- 2.2 To fulfil this mandate, air quality monitoring stations have been commissioned by all government spheres from national department to local municipalities. There are currently 135 fully automated air quality monitoring stations, across the country. All stations are based on traditional reference monitoring techniques as is prescribed in Section 9 of the NEMAQA. The stations form the National Ambient Air Quality Monitoring Network (NAAQMN) and are located in areas with the highest density of people in order to measure human exposure to air pollution. The stations provide important information in order to assess compliance with ambient air quality standards and to assess the impact of intervention strategies aimed at addressing air pollution. In addition, the monitoring stations also provide valuable data regarding the state of ambient air quality that the citizens of the Republic are exposed to. These data have also been used in the development of air quality management policies and intervention strategies such as air quality management plans. The map below shows the location of the ambient monitoring stations.
- 2.3 The DFFE, in partnership with the South Africa Weather Service (SAWS) established the South African Air Quality Information System (SAAQIS) to disseminate air quality information to the public. At the centre of the SAAQIS is the ambient air quality monitoring component, which provides the public with REAL TIME information on the state of ambient air quality. The SAAQIS contains dedicated tools for capturing, analysing, reporting, and archiving ambient air quality data. The SAAQIS also includes a mobile application for Android and IOS platforms, where ambient information can be accessed by the general public using smart phones. To date, over 100 government stations are reporting in real time to the SAAQIS on <https://saaqis.environment.gov.za/>.

Figure 1. National Ambient Air Quality Monitoring Network, NAAQMN reporting in real time to SAAQIS website (taken on 30 July 2021 at 09:30 <https://saaqis.environment.gov.za/>). The monitoring stations are located to best measure human exposure to air pollution.

3 NAAQMN CHALLENGES – PROBLEM STATEMENT

- 3.1 The commissioning of the NAAQMN has been an immense investment by all spheres of government. All infrastructure and equipment at the monitoring stations are based on reference monitoring techniques, as such, a station deployment may possibly cost up to R3.0million depending on the instruments installed. Above this capital investment, there are additional operational budget required to maintain and manage stations effectively. The value of this investment is not fully being realised in some areas as a substantial number of NAAQMN stations are not fully operational, hence not providing information to the public. What has emerged over the years is that many station owners have been unable to manage and maintain their monitoring stations at the required level in order to produce air quality data that is scientifically sound for decision making.
- 3.2 The NAAQMN is facing a number of challenges including:
  - 3.2.1 In most networks, there are no long-term financial commitment towards the management and maintenance of the ambient monitoring stations after commissioning. Where

- operational budgets are committed to, there is limited funding allocated to infrastructure recapitalisation in case of major breakdowns or when aging equipment has to be replaced.
- 3.2.2 In other cases, financial commitments are made towards stations operation, maintenance and management; however, these financial resources might be redirected to other municipal services due to the changes in priorities, thereby rendering the efficient management of the stations impossible.
- 3.2.3 The majority of the NAAQMN stations were commissioned between 2004 and 2010. The majority of the infrastructure is aging and requires significant capital expenditure to recapitalise and modernise.
- 3.2.4 There is limited technical capacity within most government spheres to operate and maintain the monitoring stations in optimal conditions. Where municipalities have enlisted the services of consultants, there is limited capacity to manage the service providers in order to ensure that efficient services are rendered.
- 3.2.5 The monitoring networks are operated by several spheres of government, with different quality systems and capacities for managing monitoring networks. Such approach limits the level of consistency in the way data is collected and verified. In some cases, the quality of data is not guaranteed.

4 PROJECT OBJECTIVES

- 4.1 In light of the current challenges with the ambient air quality monitoring, the department seeks to appoint a service provider to supply and commission 32 low cost sensors as well as to maintain, repair and provide technical support on the infrastructure for a period of five (5) years.
- 4.2 The low-cost sensors will be deployed at existing monitoring stations that are not meeting monitoring objectives within the NAAQMN.
- 4.3 The department is undertaking this leading initiative, taking cognisance of the growing international opportunities and advancements of using low-cost sensors in air quality monitoring. The low-cost sensors are monitors of choice because they are portable, compact and affordable air quality sensors that can be deployed in practical timeframes in order to speedily supplement the NAAQMN and address some of the immediate challenges. Low-cost sensors are cost-effective with the ability to act as a single station and measure a variety of pollutants such as particulate matter (both PM<sub>2.5</sub>, PM<sub>10</sub>), sulphur dioxide (SO<sub>2</sub>), nitrogen dioxide (NO<sub>2</sub>), ozone (O<sub>3</sub>) and carbon monoxide (CO) and some meteorological parameters. The sensors can be deployed quickly without the need for station shelter and air conditioning systems. In addition, some of these sensors are able to use solar power instead of needing electricity. Due to the sensor sizes, little effort is required to commission the sensors (usually the sensors are installed on single poles or can use existing infrastructure such as rooftops, or electricity poles).

5 SCOPE AND EXTENT OF WORK

To achieve the overall project objective of assisting the department with the supply, installation, commissioning, maintenance, repairs and technical support of 32 low cost sensors, the service provider must deliver the following Outcomes A to C:

5.5 OUTCOME A: SUPPLY AND DELIVERY OF 32 LOW-COST SENSORS

- 5.1.1 The service provider must supply to the department 32 air quality monitoring low-cost sensors. For this pilot project, 16 sensors must be of metal oxide semiconductor (MOS) and 16 of electrochemical (EC) types for the measurement of trace gases. The sensors must have the ability to measure and meet mandatory parameters and requirements as stipulated in Table 5-2. For all parameters monitored, evidence on how well the sensors perform in comparison to reference monitoring technologies (coefficient of determination, R<sup>2</sup>) must be based on independent published documentation. All such documentation must be included as part of the bid proposal. The ability for the sensors to measure additional pollutants will be an added advantage.

5.2 OUTPUT B: INSTALLATION AND COMMISSIONING OF 32 LOW-COST SENSORS

5.2.1 The service provider must install the 32 low-cost sensors at locations identified in Figure 2. In order to do so, the service provider must possess the expertise and capacity to undertake installation and commissioning of the sensors across the country.

- 5.2.2 Once installed and commissioned, the service provider must calibrate the sensors and monitor the performance of each sensor for at least 30 days, undertake sensor performance analyses and provide a report to the department as part of the commissioning report.
- 5.2.3 Due to the nature of the outcome, travelling expenses by the service provider for the installation and commissioning of the sensors will be considered as a prime cost item to ensure fair competition in the bidding process. In addition, the ancillary expenditures incurred during installation such as power supply and cabling connections, sensor mountings, sampling equipment and data connection to SAAQIS will also be considered as prime cost items.

- 5.3.1 Based on the manufacturer specifications, the service provider must include a technical support plan for as long as the sensors warranties stand as well as a sensor maintenance plan for the period of five years. Repair will be considered as and when the services are required by the department.

- 5.3.2 As part of the service level agreement, all sensors must be regularly calibrated to ensure data integrity. The service provider must establish a calibration program for the sensors, that will support the sensor data analyses for the five-year period. The program must take into account data correction principles due to the changes in meteorological conditions (such as relative humidity and ambient temperature) as well as changes in seasonal composition of atmospheric pollutants, especially particulate matter. The program must outline how these corrections will be carried out to ensure accurate data are reported to the public.
- 5.3.3 The department will be responsible for the management of data as well as reporting the state of air.
