1. BACKGROUND

TASEZ Zone Operations is committed to providing its tenants with world-class facilities that comply with health and safety regulations. In line with TASEZ's maintenance strategy, the facilities must be maintained to the highest standards, meet statutory obligations, and address the operational needs of the investor community. A "dock leveller" is a piece of equipment used at a loading dock to bridge the gap in height between a delivery truck and the warehouse floor, allowing for smooth and safe loading and unloading of goods by forklifts or other machinery, essentially creating a stable platform for transitioning between the two levels; it typically features a movable platform that can be raised or lowered to match the truck's height and often includes a "lip" that extends to further close the gap between the truck and dock.
