INTRODUCTION TO THE ITHEMBA LABS BUSINESS UNIT

iThemba LABS (Laboratory for Accelerator-Based Sciences) is a multi-disciplinary research laboratory based at two sites in the Western Cape and Gauteng respectively, providing facilities for:

- Basic and applied nuclear physics research using particle beams
- Research radiation biophysics
- Research in Material and Nano science
- Research in Accelerator Mass Spectrometry
- The supply of accelerator-produced radioactive isotopes for nuclear medicine and research.

Please visit the iThemba LABS website (<http://tlabs.ac.za>) for more information.

CONTEXT OF THIS PROCUREMENT NEED

iThemba LABS is in the process of expanding its existing facility in the Western Cape for the production of medical radioisotopes. The basis for this expansion is the acquisition of a new 70 MeV cyclotron which will be installed in existing concrete vaults on site and connected to newly upgraded radioisotope production infrastructure.

The final facility will consist of a compact cyclotron accelerator able to accelerate proton beams to a maximum energy of 70 MeV. This facility will also comprise of beam lines for transporting the charged particle beams, and two vaults which will be utilized for installation of target stations for production of radioisotopes, as well as the radioisotope processing facilities as shown in figure 1. This is collectively known as the South African Isotope Facility (SAIF) project.

As part of the SAIF project, iThemba LABS will design and install high intensity bombardment target stations for the production of radioisotopes. During the irradiation the target surface will develop a hot spot due to the power dissipation from the ion beam. In order to reduce the power dissipation on one spot and prevent heat accumulation on the target surface, two H-type dipole magnets will sweep the particle beams into a circular motion on the target. To enable the dipole magnet to sweep the beam on the target surface, the magnet will require an alternating current to excite the coils to induce a sinusoidal magnetic field. A changing magnetic field will induce eddy currents which will flow on the surface of all conductive materials, which will in turn induce a magnetic field with opposite direction to the desired field. These phenomena will require more power to achieve the desired magnetic field for sweeping. The flow of current inside the conductive materials will also cause such material to heat up. In order to prevent the flow of eddy currents on the surface of the beam pipe, it should be made of the ceramic material alumina minimum purity of ($\geq 95\%$ Al_2O_3) instead of stainless steel. This tender document is prepared for the procurements of the required ceramic beam pipes which will be installed inside sweeper magnets.

PART A – CONTRACT

INTERDEPENDENCIES IMPACTING THIS SPECIFICATION

The dimensions of the ceramic pipes should be as accurate as possible to the drawings. The ceramic pipes will be fitted inside the sweeper magnet assembly and due to the very small clearance between the magnet pole and the ceramic pipe, the outside diameter tolerance should be ± 0.3 mm to avoid the sweeper magnets exerting undue pressure on the ceramic material and risk breaking the pipe.

DETAILED SPECIFICATIONS

The supplier must manufacture vacuum sealed ceramic (alumina $\geq 95\%$ Al_2O_3) beam pipes as specified below. The ceramic pipes supplied should be fitted with stainless steel flanges on both ends to be connected to the stainless steel beam pipe. The inner part of the beam pipe should be coated with a titanium coating for the purpose of grounding and measuring beam current hitting the pipe. The length of the pipe is specified with the flanges; the drawings will also be provided separately in addition to the provided in Annexures below. The beam pipe specifications should be as defined on the table below:

Table 1: Dimensions of the Ceramic beam-pipes

Item	Specification
Quantity	Five (5)
Overall length (including flanges)	858 mm $\pm$ 2 mm
Inner Diameter	100 mm $\pm$ 0.3 mm

	Outer Diameter	111 mm ± 0.3 mm
	Titanium Coating Thickness	≤ 0.2 μm
	Titanium Coating Electrical Resistance	≥ 3 Ω /square
The thickness of the titanium coating should be specified based on the surface resistance when measured from one end of the ceramic pipe to the other. This resistance should be ≥ 3 Ω/square with a thickness of ≤ 0.2 μm. The higher the surface resistance the lower the power dissipated on the conductive surface and the lower the heat generated. The beam pipe should be vacuum tight with the leak rate of $Q_{He} \leq 1 \cdot 10^{-10} \text{ Pa m}^3 \text{ s}^{-1}$.
