Ex-champion Norman not invited to 150th Open celebrations

Two-times Open champion Greg Norman has not been invited to the celebrations at the 150th edition of the championship, organisers Royal & Ancient (R&A) said on Saturday, as they feared his involvement with LIV Golf would tarnish the occasion. Norman, who won the Open in 1986 and 1993, is the CEO of LIV Golf — the lucrative, Saudi-backed series that has split the sport and led to Europe's DP World Tour and US-based PGA Tour suspending players who join the rebel league. The R&A said Norman, a former world number one, would not attend the Celebration of Champions field and the Champions' Dinner at the Open, which will be held at St Andrews from July 14-17. "We can confirm that we contacted Greg Norman to advise him that we decided not to invite him to attend on this occasion," the R&A said. "The 150th Open is an extremely important milestone for golf and we want to ensure that the focus remains on celebrating the championship and its heritage. "Unfortunately, we do not believe that would be the case if Greg were to attend. We hope that when circumstances allow, Greg will be able to attend again in future." Norman, 67, had also intended to come out of retirement and had asked to play in the major but his request was turned down, with the body saying they would not alter their stance on entry requirements to accommodate him. Australian Norman is the frontman for the $255m (R4.2bn) LIV series which is being bankrolled by Saudi Arabia's Public Investment Fund, which critics say is a vehicle for the country to improve its image in view of its human rights record. Its opening event in London was won by SA's Charl Schwartzel, who took home prize money worth $4m (R67m) — the biggest pay cheque in golf history. The winner of the 150th Open will receive $2.5m (R42m) in prize money. Meanwhile, Jordan Spieth took to social media to deny a report that he is in discussions to exit the PGA Tour in favour of the LIV Golf Invitational Series. Golf Monthly reported that Spieth was in talks with the Saudi-backed LIV Golf series. The new circuit has added Phil Mickelson, Brooks Koepka, Bryson DeChambeau and Sergio Garcia among others. Spieth, who is listed 12th in the Official World Golf Ranking, said that his name would not be added to that list. "Let me be clear, any reports that I am contemplating competing anywhere other than the PGA Tour are categorically untrue," Spieth wrote on Twitter. "I am NOT in discussions with LIV. I have been quoted on the record for months that I fully support the PGA Tour and have never considered any alternatives. "My goal has not changed since I began playing golf — to win PGA Tour events and major championships, and to compete against the best players in the world." Jay Danzi, Spieth's agent, in a statement to Golf Weekly denied the report. "Jordan is not in discussions with LIV and is fully supportive of and happy on the PGA Tour," Danzi said. Spieth, 28, is one Wanamaker Trophy away from joining the exclusive fraternity of golf royalty — Tiger Woods, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen — to have won each of golf's majors at least once. Spieth won the Masters and the US Open in 2015. He won the Open Championship in 2017. — Reuters, Field Level Media
