The Employee Value Proposition (EVP) is used to define the employee experience which an organisation uses to identify and differentiate itself against other organisations. It is closely linked, and even used interchangeably with employer brand because it details what the organisation is known for and the employee experience that it offers to set it apart from other organisations. It also is a key measure for attraction and retention of talent since it describes the attributes that employees, current and potential, identify with and make them desire to work for or stay meaningfully engaged in an organisation. We are looking for a service provider who will certify SACAA as a Top employer, to submit quotations. To review our internal policies and procedures to assist the organisation with enhance our employer brand and benchmarking our people practices against best practices.	1
