violation of legal and ethical norms, a spokesperson for Liberty Coal stated emphatically. The coal giant is uncompromising in its pursuit of justice and that it cease its operations. Kego Mining's flagrant breach of the preservation order and its continued illegal activities are unprecedented," Liberty Coal declared.

By sidelining legal authority, Kego Mining had allegedly caused significant harm to Liberty Coal and its stakeholders, resulting in a loss of R600-million that could have been used to rehabilitate the mine, settle debts and benefit employees or community trusts.

Liberty said the legal implications for Kego Mining and its director, Owen Nelson, are severe.

Under Section 75 of the Prevention of Organised Crime Act, non-compliance with preservation orders and hindering the curator bonis can result in fines or imprisonment of up to 15 years.

The egregious conduct of Kego Mining cannot go unpunished," Liberty Coal said.

The company is adamant that justice must be served, not only to recoup financial losses but also to uphold the rule of law.

Liberty Coal also demanded answers from the NDPP and the curator bonis about their inaction in protecting the preserved assets.

Liberty Coal will in due course seek to engage with the NDPP and the NPA appointed curator bonis to understand why no action was taken to protect the assets under preservation and eagerly awaits the outcome of any action by the NPA to recover the unlawful proceeds resulting from Kego Mining's illegal and unlawful dealings.

"Why were no measures taken to safeguard our interests?" Liberty Coal questioned, expressing its frustration.
