- The locking mechanism should work in conjunction with the anti-tilt mechanism ensuring that no drawers can be opened when the cabinets are tilted forward.
- The outside lock must preferably be of the removable cylinder type. The cabinets are to be supplied with master keys. These keys are to be grouped together after the delivery and installation, with attached tags identifying to what cabinet each key is the master for
- Should a key get lost, the barrel lock should preferably be interchangeable (using a special installation key). The cabinet should be able to remain locked while the barrel lock is being changed. The cabinet may open with the replacement key, without having to damage the cabinet. The keys must be of an “unbreakable” design that ensures flexibility allowing for them to be bending under a severe impact rather than break.
- The back panel and side panels of the cabinet are to be manufactured from 16mm thick Chipboard faced with a minimum of 0.35 Deacon in Vancouver Maple 688
- The exposed edges of the cabinet’s side panels are to be covered with a 2mm PVC edging colour to match.
- Any panels should be replaceable without having to dismantle or replace the whole cabinet. The panels should not carry any of the weight of the load contained within the cabinet.
- The cabinet top should be manufactured from 32mm Chipboard, which is covered on the inside with a Spantex laminate balancing foil, the top surface of the cabinets should be finished in 0.6mm Deacon Vancouver Maple 688 the drawer front walls are to be manufactured from 16mm thick Chipboard faced with minimum 0.35mm Vancouver Maple 688
- All cabinets to accommodate a containerised A4 filing system
